Israel's Cabinet Is Ready to Vote Return to Talks

By Yuval Elizur

JERUSALEM Dec. 27 (WF).—The long-delayed Israel government decision to return to the Middle East peace talks under the auspices of UN mediator Gunnar V. Jarring can be definitely expected in the cabinet meeting tomorrow. The last obstacle to the return to the talks was removed today when the National Religious party, a junior partner in Israel's coalition government, decided not to obstruct the

The usual weekly meeting of the Israeli cabinet was postponed from today to tomorrow to let the governing body of the National Religious party reach a decision on its stand on the talks. Although the ruling Labor alignment could have obtained a majority vote in Israel's 120-member Knesset (parliament) in favor of a decision to go back to the talks even without the support of the National Religions party, which commands 12 votes in the Knesset, the decision will be a welcome relief to Premier Golda Meir.

Mrs. Meir was most anxious to avoid another government crisis similar to that which took place on Aug. 4 when the Israel government had originally decided to go to Mr. Jarring's conference table. At that time six ministers of Gahal, the right-wing group, resigned from the coalition cabinet and their party now heads the parliamentary opposition to Mrs. Meir.

Israel withdrew from the Jarring talks on Sept. 6, before they had really gathered momentum. It claimed that the Soviet-Egyptian missile buildup along the Suez Canal, in violation of the cease-fire agreement of Aug. 7, had cut the ground from under the talks.

Although the missiles have not been removed and Israel has not obtained full satisfaction in its drawn-out contacts with the United States, it will be returning to the talks. The negotiations with the United States were designed to secure for Israel the military and political backing necessary to enable her to resist pressure to submit to a settlement with which she disagrees disagrees.

If the Israeli cabinet takes a positive decision tomorrow, a move which looked almost certain tonight, Mrs. Meir may have to face on Tuesday a motion for a vote of no confidence. In casa of such a yote the government can expect a clear majority with the Religious party members voting with Mrs. Meir's labor alignment.

The governing body of the Religious party met Thursday but when the vote looked like a toss-up it was agreed to postpone the decision until today. Mrs. Meir agreed to set back her cabinet meeting by ene-day to enable the three ministers representing the Religious party to form a party stand before the government vote. Over the weekend there were numerous talks between the Religious party leadership and their labor coalition partners. The minister of defense, Moshe Dayan, this morning threw in his weight in favor of a decision to return to

By James Reston

THEL AVIV, Dec. 19 (NYT).-Tha indications here are that the Israeli government will decide soon to rejoin the UN talks on the Middle East, but Premier Golda Meir is decidedly pessimistic about the chances for a settlement:

If there is any slight hope of reaching a real peace with Egypt and the other Arab countries, Mrs. Meir said in an interview, recently, it will take a very long time. Anybody who thinks this can be settled in a hurry, she added, must think Israel will give the Arabs everything they want or can be wheedled into doing so.

It is important to realize that the Soviet Union was back of all this trouble in the Middle East, the premier emphasized. She compared the Soviet campalgn against Israel now with the German expansionist moves against Czechoslovakia in 1938, but there is one fundamental difference, she said: Israel would actively defend itself it or tried to undermine its security.

Sadat Lists Conditions For Peace -

Cident Anwar Sadat of Egypt, in an interview with The New York Times, has for the first time defined his nation's conditions for peace with Israel in the Middle East war, They are as follows:

• If it does, Egypt will recognize the rights of Israel as an independent state as defined by the Security Council of the United Nations and will welcome a guarantee by the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France of all Middle East

The first half of 1970 was a turning point in the war: It was like the Battle of Britain, for, with Soviet SAM-3 missiles, Egypt broke Israel's air superiority over central Egypt and Cairo. The second half of 1970 was "a time of sorrows" with the death of Nasser and the fighting in Jordan.

the Rand Institute. 'Slippery water" is inexpensive, handy and solves a problem that has bedeviled firemen for years: How to get large amounts of water through light and manageable hoses without friction cutting down the water pressure. Polyethylene Oxide

"You can cut off 1 million dollars of damage in a $10 million fire with $300 worth of the stuff," said Dr. Blum. "The stuff" is polyethylene oxide, a long-chain organic molecule called a polymer that increases the flow of water through a hose by 70 percent and doubles the reach of the stream.

A fireman can deliver as much "slippery water" with a light, easily manageable hose as with the more common large, bulky and heavy hoses.

Polyethylene oxide has been known for about 25 years, but until two years ago it was regarded as a laboratory curiosity, said Dr. Blum. The New York City tests are its first use in fire fighting.

worldwide expressions of horror over the death penalties which followed the first Leningrad trials by charging that "Zionist circles" have been "whipping up a new fit of anti-Soviet hysteria." That, in the complex reactions to the case, the particularly Zionist emotions over the "ingathering of the exiles" played a part is undeniable. So. too, have the circumstances surrounding the Soviet attitude toward the Middle East as a whole.

But the imposition of death sentences on Jews accused of trying to flee the Soviet Union by conspiring to hijack a plane produced a revulsion in quarters far removed from any hint of Israeli influence—in the French and British Communist parties, for example. And, in a curious way, the breadth and intensity of the protest against the operations of the Soviet judicial system are a tribute to the changed position of the Soviet Union in the eyes of the world.

No one was particularly surprised when the Stalinist purges killed off many to the accompaniment of allegations of Zionist cosmopolitanism. But today, even after the campaign against dissident intellectuals. even after the intervention in Czechoslovakia, it was a shock to find a Soviet court regarding an attempt to fice abroad as treasonable, and deserving a capital penalty.

It brought a new recognition that the Soviet Union has its own Berlin wall in Article 64-A of the criminal code; that, just as those who man the wall will shoot down any who seek to overleap it, so the Soviet

The Soviet Union has responded to the courts will punish with death those who infringe that article. Both are at once the symbols and the hard facts of the closed society; both stand for the painful truth that the Communist system, which purports to be founded on an intellectual acceptance of certain political and economic precepts. in reality has reverted to the feudal concept that the serf is bound to the land. This concept is repulsive to those voluntary societies which regard both immigration and emigration as human rights, conditional, perhaps, but nevertheless rights. And when the enforcement of an essentially for all idea has overtones of darker medleval ness, when it is accompanied by reminders that it was the Russian secret police which concocted the fraud of the "Protocols of the Elders of Zion," and that it was the Russian pogroms that prefigured Dachau, and that it was Stalin who made his version of the Protocols the excuse for eliminating those whose conduct did not accord with Kremlin policy, the repulsion deepens.

Hijacking a plane is an international crime. Conspiracy to hijack a plane is surely a domestic offense. But when the death penalty is imposed upon convicted conspirators who were not trying to get a free ride, or to escape legitimate penalties '-crimes committed at home, but simply -cause it was the only way in which they could leave one country for another, the hysteria does not lie in the protests, but in the penalty. civilian agencles. It has an inescapably CAIRO.—President Sadat of the chilling effect on the exercise of First Amendment freedoms-particularly on the United Arab Republic has already changed the tone of political right of expression and the right of association. And this operates to thwart selflife in Cairo. He is very bitter about Israel; sarcastic about "the government by depriving those in authority Jews" haggling for territory, but, of the challenges which promote efficiency unlike Nasser, he talks primarily about "Egypt" and seems to waste and bring about the correction of official little time dreaming about a vast Arab empire.

Bot surveillance of political dissent by the military is the most chilling of all because the military possesses such overwhelming physical power. It used to be an American tradition to avoid all but the most minute armies in peacetime; that distrust of military power grew out of an awareness that all power tends to be self-aggrandizing. But a minute army is a luxury not compatible with the realities of the contemporary world. The United States is obliged today to maintain a great military establishment. It can afford to do so, however, only if it confines that establishment resolutely to its appropriate purposes.

No doubt Secretary Laird has a firm grasp on the importance of civilian control of the military, gleaned from his career in the House of Representatives. The reorganization he has ordered must amount to much more than mere window-dressing. It must genuinely serve to put the men in uniform in their proper relation to civilian authority. And although the Euro-pean allies have promised addi-tional financial sid, the offer is far from what many of Mansfield's supporters want. A battle between the executive and the legislative branches thus is shaping up for next year. _ .

The reasons for this are legion: the balance-of-payments loss in-volved in sustaining U.S. troops in Europe, the desire to transfer resources to domestic needs, the feeling that the Europeans should do much more. But there is something else, too: a form of neo-isolationism which combines those reasons with a disbelief that there really is much danger of a Soviet attack in Europe and that those who say there is are bogged in the thinking of the Fulbright Among Them How many members of Congress feel this way is impossible to tell. But that the chairman of the Sen-ats Foreign Relations Committee, J. William Fulbright, does is beyond doubt. The sad thing is that the United States, in advance of this inevitable etruggle, is seen by a powerful group of forces including the youth, the universities, the liberals, the intellectuals and large segments of the church and business as a right-wing influence committed to supporting the most reactionary so-

This is especially tragic because it surely cannot be the intended U.S. position. Nevertheless, it is a fact. During a visit to Spain six months ago I talked with many opposition representatives, including former cabinet ministers, ambassa, dors, professors, liberal monarchists, avowed Communists, students, workers and priests.

They disagreed with one another on almost everything except their dislike for Franco and their insistence that American Ambassador Robert Hill and his staff were such outright regime supporters that it was impossible for the opposition to have any contacts with them.

This is the sad truth as Spain prepares for a time of troubles when the attempt is made to contime Francoism without Franco, a virtual impossibility because, as a Jesuit priest told me: "There are no valid institutions in Spain, Franco is the only institution, and most of those who back him today would not back his successors tomorrow."

Postwar Coldness

After World War II Washington was in the van of those wanting to quarantine Franco and then, a few years later, led those who wished to attract Spain out of isolation. In each instance America was too enthusiastic, and in the latter case it is likely to pay for that excess of zeal.

McCormack to Retire

House Undergoing Changing of Guard

By John W. Finney

WASHINGTON (NYT). - In the ceremonial manner beloved by politicians, the changing of the guard is taking place in the House of Representatives -but no one is quite sure what the new guard will bring to a tradition-bound institution that is feeling the winds of reform. Within the next few days, John W. McCormack, the Irish politician from South Boston. will bang his gavel for the last time on the speaker's desk. At the age of 79, he is stepping down as epeaker, retiring from a political life that began 50 years ago when he was first elected to the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

For nearly nine years, the surprisingly energetic Rep. Mc-Cormack has ruled over the House-longer continuous service than any of his predecessors. For all the private critieism of his stewardship-and there hae been considerable among the liberais in bis closing years-the words of praise and gifts that were lavished on him day after day by his colleagues were a sincere tribute to a man who had contributed much in his 42 years in the

In part, the tributes reflected the deep-grained roverence in the House for "The Speaker"after the President, the most powerful elected official in the government. More than many of his predecessors, Rep. Mc-Cormack ruled over the House with the impartial voice that is expected from the speaker. In his case it was sometimes enlivened by a glint of Irisb

Beyond His Time

If there was a political tragedy to Rep. McCormack's career. It was that, like so many politicians, he served beyond his time. In an age when nuclear weapons have completely harked back to Pearl Harbor every time he spoke on the defense budget. When his party was hard pressed at the polls. as in 1968, he was bewildered that the voters would turn on a party that had given them Social Security a quarter of a century before. At a time when Vietnam had become the predominant issue, Rep. McCor-mack, brought up to believe infallible when it comes to forcign policy, stifled any debate on the war. But most of all in his final years he lost touch with the vounger generation of congressmen and became a symbol of the heavy hand of seniorlty that was weighing down the

This restive and frustrated younger generation undoubtedly gained strength in the November elections. Some of the senior members of the establishment ruled over by Rep. McCormack were defeated, men such as George H. Fallon, chairman of the Public Works Committee, and Samuel N. Friedel, chairman of the House Administration Committee. According to an analysis by the influential National Committee for an Effective Congress, the "peace forces" in the House probably will pick up 12 to 15 votes in the new Congress. On general domestic issues, the blpartisan liberals have gained 15 to 20 votes. And within the Democratic caucus, which may become the ultimate power center within the House, the reform forces can count on at least 25 re.

Albert of Oklahoma

But despite this tilt of strength toward the younger generation, there still remains a question whether the speaker's departure will mean that the grip of the older establishment will be broken. He undoubtedly will be succeeded by Carl Albert of Oklahoma, the present majority leader. In principle that should mean some change. At 62, Rep. Albert is somewhat more energetic than Rep. Mc-Cormack and decidedly more sympathetic to the complaints of the younger generation that something must be done to seniority system. He is also less reverent of the presidency, which means that Rep. Albert probably will strike a more partisan role than Rep. McCormack, who came to regard himself as the patriarchiai parliamentarian of the House.

But in his political upbring-ing, Rep. Albert was cast from the same political mold as Rep. McCormack-a mold carved by the late Speaker Sam Rayburn, who tapped the two men as his proteges. With that back-ground, combined with what many of his colleagues regard as a certain indecisiveness, there is considerable question in the younger generation over whethcr Rep. Albert will be a strong voice for change in the House. As one young Democratic re-former put it: "Carl is an attractive small boat without a guiding the course of the Albert speakership, it will probably come from the new majority leader. For that post a fourway race has developed between two Democratic liberals—James G. O'Hara of Michigan and Morris K. Udall of Arizonaand two establishment moderates-Hale Boggs of Louisiana, presently the Democratic whip, and B. F. Sisk of California. At this point, none of the four appears to be within striking distance of the necessary 128 votes, aithough the liberal candidates appear to have the numerical edge. Should either Rep. Udali or Rep. O'Hara be elected, the House would probably change course gradually toward a more assertive, liberal position. But with either Rep. Boggs or Rep. Sisk, there probably would not be much change

McCormack.

WASHINGTON (NYT). - In

July of 1969, at an airport etop in Guam at the start of a five-nation tour of the Far East, President Nixon told newsmen of his hope that in the future America's Asian allies could play a much greater role in their own defense.

By William Beecher

Mr. Nixon said that, while the United States would continue to meet its commitments in Asia, the time was past when could or should permit its friends there to become so dependent that America could be dragged into future Victnams. The United States will assist its friends, but neither dictate to them nor assume the principal hurden of providing troops for their defense.

The words the President spoke that day have come to be known as the Nixon Dectrine. In government offices from Washington to Bangkok, officials ever since have been trying to figure out how the principle translate in practice.

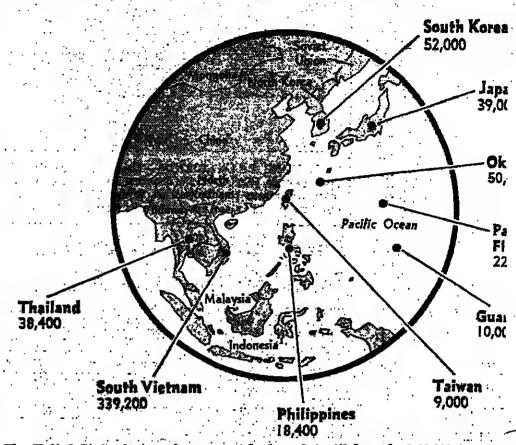

Cutback in Japan

In Tokyo last week, another piece of the puzzle fell into place when the United States formally announced plans for the rapid withdrawal of 12,000 soldiers, sailore and airmen from Japan-nearly one-third of the American military presence there. Also, hy midsum-mer, according to separate announcements, the Nixon administration will withdraw more than 250,000 troops from South Vietnam, 20,000 from South Kores, 16,000 from Thailand, 6,000 from the Philippines and 5,000 from Okinawa.

And that is not the last of it, by a long shot. Planners claim that the Vietnam force wili shrink to an essentially advisory group of somewhere between 30,000 and 100,000 men probably by the summer of 1972. And they say the much smaller American garrisons elsewhere in the Far East will continue to shrink as well.

Last summer, when word reached Seoul that the United States would withdraw nearly a third of its 64,000 troops, the government was shaken, and a mass cabinet resignation was threatened at one point. The Korean reaction is understandable in that South Korea seems genuinely to fear another attack from North Korea and worries the two American infantry implications of the American

United States Troops in Asia and the Pacific

The United States last week announced plans for withdrawal of 12,000 troops for Japan. The move was part of the so-called Nixon Doctrine, which calls for redu-American forces in Asia and the Pacific (see map) and having the countries volved "play a much greater role in their own defense."

divisions there might signal weakness to the North,

In contrast, Japan took similar news last week with outward calm. The Japanese, in fact, joined the United States in a statement of mutual assurance that the essential ele-ments of the U.S. deterrent posture will not be significantly affected."

Japan, however, does not feel threatened. So long as Amer-ican Minuteman and Polaris missiles remain aimed at the Soviet Union and Communist China, Japanese officials say they are not worried about nu-clear blackmail. And even a reduced Seventh Fleet, they say, should be sufficient to guard against the remote prospect of a conventional invasion of the home islands.

But privately, leaders of several Asian nations express deep troop disengagement from the Far East, Britain, they note, is virtually out of Asia militarily. Russia is moving its expanded fleet over more actively into Asian waters, China seeems to be gradually recuperating from the effects of the "cultural revolution" and continues to plow scarce resources into its nuclear weapons program. . . And even Japan, according to some Asian leaders who cannot forget the not-too-distant past, seems to be listening to a more nationalistic drummer. while its businessmen have come near to achieving the effects of the Asian co-prosperity sphere which earlier served as a trigger for World War II.

Imperialism Doubted

While these leaders do not predict a return of Japanese them fret about the growing will doubtless emerge.

But the outward calm of the briefing officer hadn't fooled anyone. Every pilot knew this Tuesday's raid was different. There had been rumors for days now that the Allied forces were mounting a major assault of tha Continent. The push would have to come soon. It was only a question

And now-June 6, 1944—every availabla plane from Walker's base had been ordered up to hit the German-held oil preserves in Romania. Later, the date would be known simply as D-Day.

The squadron moved across the Adriatic, Albania, Yugoslavia and, finally, over the Romanian border. The oil fields were

The second engine, the left outboard, was hit by flak three minutes later. Moments later, a German fighter spattered the crippled aircraft on a single pass, rupturing a fuel tank.

Since he had parachuted back into his homeland 21 months before, Kacarevic had seen many B-24s burrow back to earth. He knew the crash-landing's lifesigns; its death-signs.

This time, he told himself, there would surely be survivors. And that meant added worrles. For himself. For his men, And for the villagers whose scattered homelets dotted the surrounding hills.

Downed airmen were a burden, like naked baby birds fallen from the nest. Not that Kacarevic wouldn't see to their safety, medical needs and shelter. It was just that they got in the way of his job. In the months since he balled out over Yugoslevia, fresh from a British com-

What followed was a 66-day nightmare that Walker, even now, is hesitant to discuss in much detail. "From the moment they got us out of the plane, until the day we were elrlifted out, we were on the move: a day in this village, a

We slept in barns, in haystacks, on hillsides. Occasionally, wo'd meet other small groups of filers. They were also being moved about by bands of Chetniks." At first, fear that his own men might be discovered by the Germans so occupied Walker's thoughte that he didn't concern himself about the other groups of fliers. But, as the weeks wore on, it became apparent that these occasional encounters along woodland paths were part of an elaborate hide-and-seek being waged against the Nazis by the slim. young Chetnik lieutenant Walker had seen the day of his crash. Then one day it struck him: The groups he'd been seeing were never the same. Kacarevic, it turned out, had his native hills literally crawling with allied airmen-270 to be exact.

"Among those men were guys with one leg, men half out of their minds, and others who were just plain afraid the "Somehow Kacarevie managed to ac-

Kacarevic, Walkor recalls, rarely seemed aware of any danger. The portrait of the Yugoslav still etched in Walker's mind is of a laughing, carefree young guerrilla officer who spoke English poorly hut did his best to keep his charges in good spirits. "He was a kind of funny guy with a dry sense of bumor. He'd come into a barn where we were staying at the moment, kid us about the accommodations, then disappear for two or three days."

When Kacarevic "disappeared," it was buildusually to the secret airstrip he was building on a nearby mountain plateau. The airstrip, he knew, was vital if the fliers were ever to leave Yugoslavia alive. He had begun to clear away boulders end trees in March, 1943, using village labor: he "bought" for pinches of raw tobacco. Sbortly after Walker's plane went down, Kacarcylc—his mounting number of American refugees getting out of hand decided to press the fliers into his work force. By August, the crude landing strip

But getting the evacuation under way wasn't easy. Late in July, Kacarevic had radioed Italy that he had under his care almost 300 Ailled airmon. It would be much appreciated if comeone would fly over and pick them up. No response, "It was simple," Walker remembers. "No one believed him."

Finally a three-man "verification" taam two Army officers and a Navy radioman-parachuted in to check out Kacarevic'a pleas for assistance. Then, on Aug. 9, 1944, the first of the evacuation planes-under heavy fighter escort-arrived. The rescue took two days. Walker was one who departed the second day.

Like those who'd gone before him, he took off his flight jacket, his boots, and any other clothing useful to the Chetniks, and laid them on the growing pile at the edge of the landing strip. As Walker boarded the plane, he caught a glimpse of a skinny Chetnik lleutenant standing among the few remaining airmen. Kacarevic was wearing a "new" Army

Czechoslovak Communist party is also in effect dismantling it-self as a force capable of action independent of the directives of the Soviet Union. Its membership has shrunk from 1.6 milsimp has shrunk from 1.5 million at the time the reforms got under way to 880,000, according to little publicized figures from the party's Central Committee.

The membership figure published at the conclusion of a purge of party members last June was 1.1 million, but during a plenary meeting of the Central Committee last Dec. 10 and 11 it became known that only 880,000 had actually accepted their new party cards. The party branches are still holding 220, 000 unclaimed cards. Further-more, even among cardholders there are reported to be many who have not paid dues since the Soviet invasion of August, 1968. Voluntary resignations have been numerous, some coming after the withdrawals were repeatedly refused, but their total is not known.

They Want Out

Equally important, according to sources close to the party apparatus, is the sharp qualitative decline in the party membership. In the Prague city organization, the largest and most active in the nation, the average age of members is 57, and 55 percent of the members are more than 60 years old.

The -purge - commissions, before which each party member had to appear between the fall of 1969 and the summer of this year, were under instructions to proceed mercilessly against intellectuals and to try to persuade as many working-class members as possible to continue mem-

In many cases, members who replied negatively to the key question—Do you approve of the armed intervention of the Warsaw Pact anthorities?" found themselves cajoled by the purgers to hide their true sttitude from higher party anthorities and thus allow the party to continue to carry them on its rolls. More often than not, according to well - placed sources, the members insisted that their opposition be recorded and their membership termi-

Once expelled from the party, a former Communist has no chance of retaining his job if it carries with it authority over other employees or influence over the actions of others. Dismissal or drastic demotion has been nearly antomatic. Inquisition and purge are under way at places of employment, for Communists and non-Communists alike Under an article of the labor code, adopted this year, any employer is free to dismiss anyone whose record suggests that he has acted against "the socialist society." Although the process of liquidation is still continuing and no statistics are available, it has become clear that scientific, academic and cultural institutions have been ruinously atfected. Respected medical specialists for example, have been replaced by persons without specialist training and have been sent to work as factory physi-

The party and government apparatus has been seriously af-fected, particularly in the upper echelons. Employees of the of-ficial administrative machinery are normally quick to bend with prevailing political winds for reasons of joh security, and many beyond redemption, par-ticularly in the senior echelons.

No. 1 Example

The leading example of an unemployed party official is, of course, Alexander Dubcek, the party leader during the reforms. After dismissal earlier this year as ambassador to Turkey and expulsion from the party, Mr. Dubcek retired to his Bratislava home to await employment: He turned down a post with the Slovak social security agency for fear that it might be used best able to run Czechoslovakia has for some time been under open attack by party leaders even more pro-Soviet than him-

It is assumed here that these leaders are also operating with Soviet approval, presumably to keep Mr. Husak from the illusion of independent power. The most determined of Mr. Husak's opponents are Antonia Kapek, secretary of the Prague organization, and Aiois Indra a Central Committee secretary. At a meeting of the party presidium last month, Mr. Husak was in the minority of a 7-4 vote over an analysis of the events leading up to the Soviet invasion. The following morning Mr. Husak left for Moscow to receive Kremlin assurances of continued condi-

"Internationalist" is the term for those who accept the doctrine that the Soviet Union has the right to intervene in a soelalist country whenever it says socialism is threatened, such as in Czechoslovakia in 1968.

Opponents of Mr. Husak are conducting a campaign to pre-sent him as insufficiently internationalist. At a recent Cen-tral Committee plenum, Vasil Bilak, a strongly pro-Soviet leader, surprisingly disclosed that he had a long-missing document that would identify the genuine internationalists and from which Mr. Husak's name is conspicuously absent.

The document is the alleged 1968 letter from Czechoslovak leaders to the Soviet Union inviting the Warsaw Pact inter-

40 signers, including himself, Mr., Kapek and Mr. Indra. Whatever the political ma-neuvering, it is difficult to find in Prague anyone who takes more than a passing interest in what the party says or does-except for those who identify the limited liberty they enjoy with the political survival of Mr. Husak. One of the most significant effects of the events of 1988 has been the final eradication in the popular mind of the lingering aura of rightness and justice over the actions of the Communist party and the Soviet Union that survived even the revelations of the post-

Stalin period.

The liberalization of the spring, which emphasized the wide gulf between party rhet-oric and performance, followed by an invasion that was officially called "fraternal assistance," have left the party little credibility among the popula-

With the intellectual and technological elite systematically removed from public life, Czechosiovaks say, it is difficult to see how the problem of economic stagnation that plagued Czechoslovakia before liberalization can be solved. This pessimism appears to have taken a deep hold in Czechoslovak society and accounts for the open eynicism over the future of the country expressed at many levels.

In the 25 years since the end of World War II. Czechoslo-vakia has gone through many stages of disillusionment, but once - influential Communists say that until August, 1968, at ieast Communist party members retained the hope that they could find within the system the means of realizing their country's potential. They al-most succeeded in 1968, they say, but after their failure they feel that the initiative has passed entirely from their hands.

The only hope that the makers of the spring of 1968 see now that a change may occur within the Soviet Union. They say the hope is faint.

Mrs. Meir Pessimistic About UN Peace Talks

(Continued from Page 1) in one foot-how's the water? Is it all right? The next one goes in. There is one wave: when it is passed, then we can go on to the next one.

That is their mentality, that's how they work, and I am horrified to see how the free world sits back. It isn't that they don't understand, that's nonsense, they just don't want to see. And, of course, now we are the Russians' immediate target."

The interview with Mrs. Meir took place in her modest house in the Ramat Aviv section of Tel Aviv. Also present were her son, Menachem Meir, who was answering the telephone for her, and Peter Grose, The New York Times correspondent in Israel. The tape-recorded transcript was returned to The Times with corrections in Mrs. Meir's angular handwriting. She seemed irritated that Israel was being shoved to the peace talks before the Egyptians had met her government's ob-

fections about moving the missiles closer to the Suez Canal in the cease-fire zone.
"We cannot forget," she said,
"the bitter experiences of a flagrant violation of the standstill undertaking. The standstill was agreed to by the Russians and the Egyptians and began the moving of the missiles with it." Moreover, despite the recent ald from the United States to Israel, Mrs. Meir seemed to feel that the Egyptians were getting more military and diplomatie aid from the Soviet Union than Israel was getting from the United States.

They didn't have many thousands of Russians, as so-called experts and advisers, they didn't have Russians in operational dutles but now all this they have, and 100 percent backing for anything in territorial problems, political problems that the Egyptians will put on the table.

Too Much to Ask?

"So, I don't know, is it too much for us to ask from the United States that the supply of arms needed for our own defense he based on an ongoing relation, without the necessity for us to negotiate each time for additional shipments? And we ask that when we sit at the table to negotiate, will we be free from pressure arising from other territorial plans or decisions by international bodies?" Mrs. Meir talked almost as if she were assuming that the talks at the UN under Gunnar V. Jarring would fail, and then Israel would he faced with the possibility of a new UN resolution proposing specific borders and maybe even threatening Israel with economic sanctions

It is clear from talks with U.S. officials here that there has been some hard bargaining in recent days on this point and that while the United States has told the Israeli government that it would 'not he a party to' any such resolution, Washington has refused to commit itself to use its veto in advance, and has reminded the Israeli government that the four major powers also have "vital interests" in the

that the Big Four have special interests, particularly in the Arab oil fields of the Middle East, Israel's nightmare is that Britain and France, and maybe even the United States, would make a deal with the Soviet Union that would be convenient for the West and for Moscow but damaging to the security of

It was too had, she implied, that the Western nations had not paid more attention to their "vital interests" when the Russians started to move into the

"When the Russians started their infiltration into Egypt, after the 1955 Czech-Egyptian arms deal," she said, "we then warned that this was the first step in the plan of Soviet takeover. We were answered, Nonsense-no Arab country can (Communist, It's against the Moslem religion, and you see, Nasser put Communists in jail.' And we always came back with 'So what?' They, the Russians, have many more Communists in jail, as though that matters, as though it is important that Nasser should pass an examination in Leninism or Marxism.

"There are no greater eynics in the world than these idealists, they don't care about anything. It is interesting now that not only the Russian and Egyptian governments are publishing joint communiqués, but also their two parties."

Mrs. Meir was in a philosophic mood, but was deeply troubled, not only by anxieties over Soviet intentions and American diplomacy, but hy the erosion of faith and culture among the Jewish people.

"Twice before we had sovereignty," she said. "Twice hefore, we were occupied by foreigners. When our country was occupied by foreigners, we were never allowed to remain on the land, we were dispersed. One of the things that I don't think anyone can explain rationally is that for 2,000 years these people roamed around the world and everything, you know, happened to them-they still had that tenacity, and I don't know what you call it, to come back.

"Now this is for the third time that the Jewish people have sovereignty, but the 6 million—that was the reservoir of religion, of culture, of the real deep Jewish life-that has gone, And I would not be honest if I would tell you that I have no doubts as to whether if we are dispersed and our sovereignty destroyed, it would ever he restored again, because that reservoir of undiluted Jewishness has been destroyed."

This is her nightmare, then: that Israel is now caught up in a world struggle; that Israel is the main target of the Soriet Union and is dependent for its survival, even for the continuity of its people, on the United States, which has let it down before.

"Can I see or do I see, bonestly, that the near future has peace in store for us?" she asked. "Honestly, I can't say that. With all our skepticism Jarring's auspices, there hope that, maybe, it could lead to peace. This depends entirely on whether the other side is really interested and prepared to come to a peace agreement which will do away with future wars. This is really the basic condition.

"If this desire on the part of the Arah governments exists, then there is bope. If they are coming to the Jarring talks in a mood of serving us ultimatums and timetables, this is the blueprint for the failure of the

Mr. Kudirka first hinted at his intention to come over when he caught the eve of a lieutenant on the American cutter about 11 a.m. Looking back over his shoulder both left and right and gesturing toward the Soviet crewmen, he whispered, "Gestapo, Gestapo," A moment later he blurted: "I will go with you," and added, "Not too cold," indicating that he thought he could survive a few minutes in

Vows to Fight After the decision had been made by Rear Adm. William B. Ellis and Capt. Fletcher W. Brown jr. to return the man, Mr. Kudirka was asked if he would go peacefully. "He told Comdr. Eustis he would right anyone who would try to take him off the ship," the report

The Soviet party came on board to retrieve him, carrying 'a blanket, a rope, and a bali of material that appeared to be socks, which one of the Soviet crewmen indicated was to be used to gag Kudirka."

M. Kndirks stripped off his shirt, emptied his pockets and gave all his belongings to the Americans. He then broke loose and ran through the ship alternately struggling and escaping from the Soviet crewmen pursuing him. At one point he attempted to fling himself over the side, but two American crewmen spontaneously reached out and grabbed him to prevent him from going over. By now both ships were in a state of great commotion, "A great number of Soviet crewmen had gathered at the rail of the Soviet ship. As they followed the struggle a few feet away aboard Vigilant they screamed, yelled and pointed Kudirka ont to his pursuers," the report says.

Just before he sought asylum aboard a United States Coast Guard cutter, Lithuanian seaman Simas Kudirka. threw a pack of cigarettes to Americans on the cutter. Inside were the notes shown here. Last week, Transportation Secretary John Volpe released a report giving the first details of Mr. Kudirka's attempted defection.

The Soviets finally overpowered him and dragged him onto the flight deck of the ship "repeatedly striking Kudirka's bead against the steel rail of the ladder." Several times an American ensign, John F. Hughes, pulled the Russians off Mr. Kudirka, but finally the Soviets dragged him into a helicopter shed on the deck where they bound him and wrapped him in the blanket.

The Americans provided a small boat and at 11:40 p.m., "the defector, completely bound, was thrown by the Soviets into the boat, a distance of two or three feet ... It is not known whether he was conscious. One of the Soviet seamen sat on his head."

Mr. Sadat did not put forward his conditions and timetable for a peace settlement in any formal way. But he said: "If we agree to this, I think everything can be done. "Israel may give concessions, because she has the lands she occupies, but what sort of concessions I'm going to give ex-cept land? I can't give one ineh of land."

Presentiment of Death

Mr. Sadat said that President Nasser had had a presentiment of death and that this was why he had chosen Mr. Sadat as vice-president early this year. He also said that, after the Israeli Air Force struck an iron factory on the outskirts of Cairo, Mr. Nasser was ill but sent Moseow a message saying that he must make a secret trip to the Soviet Union at once, "I cannot wait," Mr. Sadat quoted Nasser as having said.

At the end of the interview. Mr. Sadat said that he was optimistic about almost everything in life except the Israeli problem. People in Egypt, he said, often fought for 50 years over a meter of land separating neighbors.

They are expected to double again in the few

Stop for a momeot. Think how much a long stay in the hospital will cost you or a loved one. How would you ever pay for costly, but necessary, X-rays, doctor hills, drugs and medicines? What would you do if your pay check stopped, hut living expenses kept going on the same as ever? The same rent, phone, food, all the day-to-day expenses that never stop.

What is the average breadwinner to do? We believe we have the answer in our National Home plan toat

Use toe money as you see fit-for bospital or doctor bills, mortgage or rent payments, to replace savings—or any necessary, but costly, expenses not covered by other hospital policies.

Everything costs more these days (need we tell you?) and hospital care is certaioly no exception! While 7 out of 8 Amernospital care is certainly no exception? While 7 out of 8 Americans have some hospital insurance, most have found it does not cover all bills that pile up when sickness or accident strikes. That's why National Home developed this low-cost plan that helps you pay hospital costs or other expenses.

We can never cancel your policy!

You are paid for the same number of covered days that you were in the hospital-even up to 12 full months!

Double Cash Accident Benefit.

When you and your iosured spouse are hospitalized at the came time for on accidental injury, this National Home plan pays you an EXTRAORDINARY DOUBLE CASH BENEFIT. You receive not $500.00 hat $1,000.00 a month. Your spouse receives not $500.00 but $1,000.00 a month. Pays you up to $2,000.00 cash. for these accidental losses . . .

The accidental loss of limbs or eyesight can be terrible. But if such loss occurs ony time within 90 days of the accident, you collect $1,000.00 for the complete loss of a hand or a foot or the night of an eye—and $2,000.00 for loss of two limbs or the eight of both eyes.

This means you pay no premiums, yet your full protection remains in force.

Wall Street displayed a confident and festive mood last week as the holiday period and the final days of the year approached. The stock market was not particularly hooyant and Christmas bonuses were rather lean after a rugged year for the market and the brokerage business, but a hopeful attitude was building up for 1971.

The business world was also becoming somewhat less dour lihood of better Economic sta-tistics in the first six months of the new year, improved productivity, better profit margins and the recent reality of dramatically lower interest

In recent days, some glad tidings descended on both the world of finance and husiness. The best news, certainly, was the word that the consumer price index had risen markedly less in November than in other recent months. didates for the longer-term market — given, of course, friendly enough conditions. Paribas, for one, recommends that would-be borrowers get to market fast (shop early; best the post-Christmas rush?). The theory is that the easing in long-term interest rates discernible in the fading days of 1970 will continue in early 1971, possibly even to the 8 per-cent level. That, in turn, can be expected to bring a host of borrowers into the market and again put upward pressure oo

EMU Potential

Paribas sees little likelihood that either the deutsche mark or guilder markets will expand to provide the kind of broad base which many observers have long hoped for the Eurobond market.

The infant European Monetary Unit is a possible supplement to the existing financing forms, the bank notes. But it is prohibitively expensive to most borrowers in its present form.

What Paribas does see as a possibility is a refinement of the EMU — presumably preserving the European currency base and thus its attraction as a dollar alternative but lessening the revaluation risk to the borrower and possibly the inconvenience and expense of bookkeeping in percentages of five different currencies.

. . . while on domestic European markets a somewhat more uneven trend has marooned some bond yields at levels well over national and international competition's.

Nixon May Set Up Council

Foreign Economic Policy To Get New Stress by U.S.

By Edwin L. Dale Jr.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27 (NYT) -- President Nizon will announce soon another change in the organization of the White House to give major status to the field of foreign economic policy, it was reliably reported yesterday.

Such a change was recom-mended last summer by the Advisory Council on Executive Organization, headed by Roy L. Ash, chairman of Litton Indus-

Foreign economic policy cov-ers relations with other countries in such fields as trade, foreign aid, monetary matters, business investment, tax treaties, aviation and international commodity agreements. These matters, which dominate relations with many countries, are now handled in the government by different departments with little central direction.

The Ash council's recommendation, which the President is expected to adopt in essence, would establish a White House organization in this area similar to the two organizations now existing for national security and domestic affairs.

Two Elements There are two elements to this type of organization. First, there is a "council" made up of cabinet officers or cabinet-rank officials involved in the field. This is true for both the National Security Council and the relatively new domestic council. The President frequently attends their meet-Second, there is a permanent staff, headed by a full-time chief. Henry A. Kissinger has this job for national security; John D. Ehrlichman for domestic affairs. Both have ready access to the President. There were reports that the President already had a man in mind to take this job for the new, as yet unnamed council to deal with foreign economis policy.

The Ash council reportedly found that present procedures and the structure of the gov-ernment in this field were not adequate. According to those who have read the document, the council called present procedures "particularly ineffective in providing the means to deal with the crucial relations between foreign and domestic economic and political affairs."

The council found that the government's present effort to coordinate the actions and views of the various operating departments had resulted in some 60 interagency commit-tees and similar bodies. These, the council reportedly said, "served to narrow rather than broaden the perspective from which each [department] viewe foreign economic affairs."

A dramatic example of this was the differing view taken this year by the Departments of State, Commerce and Agriculture on the import-limiting trade bill as it worked its way through Congress, particularly with regard to the long-time rivelry between the State and Agriculture Departmente on dealings with the European Common Market.

In addition, there can be conflicts in the U.S. position in dealing with a single foreign government simultaneously on such matters as aviation rights, trade barriers, shipping dis-crimination, "dumping" of goods in the U.S. market and new ioreign aid projects. Negotiating Trade

In one of the many fields in one of the many heids involved, there is now a central office in the White House with the title of Special Representative for Trade Negotiations, headed by Carl J. Gilbert. The Ash report is understood to have recommended that the operating head of the new council continue to have the function of negotiating trade matters, but not be the actual pegotiator with foreign countries in the other areas involved.

It is not known whether the President will accept this sug-

Besides creating a more efficient organization for gov-ernment decision-making in foreign economic policy, a major reason for elevating this task to the White House level is to give it more promineoce in overall foreign policy. in his hand and led a spade

The North-South partnership reached a contract of four spades after North had opened the bidding with one club. East chose a pre-emptive jump to three diamonds which, as the diagram shows, does not serve to prevent South from Four spades is reached South has two top losers in diamonds, and it is therefore necessary to hold the trump losers to one. The percentage play in this situation is to lead low to the king rather than to lead an honor for a finesse.

The two possible plays break even if the trumps break twotwo and each defender has one honor. The play of a low card to the king gains when East has a singleton queen, and might gain when West has a singleton queen.

But, as some declarers realized, the play to the spade king was questionable here, especially if the defenders were expert. If West held a doubleton spade ace, together with the doubleton diamond ace, which can be inferred from the bidding and early play, the defenders have missed the chance to defeat the contract.

After the lead of the diamond ace and a diamond continuation East can play a third diamond, West can ruff with the spade ace and the contract will fail: East's queen will be the setting trick.

I CAN'T FIND MY RECORDS, OR MY LITTLE RADIO, OR

THE TYRANNY OF NOISE

By Robert Alex Baron. St. Martin's Press. 294 un. Reviewed by Patrick M. McGrady, Jr.

EVER since Mr. Stattery the contractor nested his flatulent air compressors, jackhammers and pneumatic drills un-der my infant daughter's bedroom two years ago, I have been waiting for the publication of a book like 'The Tyranny of Noise." It signifies an ecological landmark, the first comprehensive serions counterstack against the world's most prevalent (and most ignored) pollution-noise.

With this book, Robert Alex Baron, former actor and currently head of New York's Citizens for a Quieter City, joins the ranks of the Naders, Ehrlichs and lesser-sung messiahs who have exposed the establishment sinning in the grand, pub-lic-be-damned manner.

It is a reading in outrage and frustration. Baron, who also tried to duel with Slattery's Army got just as far as I did with them—which was exactly nowhere. Although our family suffered for a mere ten days or so, poor Baron endured their racket for nearly three years. The role of thumb seems to be that any socially useful pretext (such as subway construction in Baron's case) gives the noisemaker carte blanche to commit acoustical murder in the neighborhood.

What is especially disturbing about all this is, as Baron demonstrates, that there are quieter alternatives for the earcrushing: equipment used by construction companies. Yet so far government agencies have not lifted a finger to compel the noisemakers to use them. Noise is driving lots of us crackers. A mother threatens to bomb the J.F.K. control tower. A Parisian potshoots at the frolicking patrons of a restaurant across the street. An otherwise staid business executive starts sniping at Air Force jes flying low over his newly purchased farm (he eventually moved). In Munich, a more imaginative soul, dubbed the Kartoffel Werfer (potato-thrower) by the press, scared hell out of pilots with massive dumpling-missiles launched at their fuselages from a homemade Roman-style slingshot. Crazy, perhaps, but be got the airplanes flight paths changed.

Ever since Julius Caesar tried vainly to ban daylight charloteering in Rome, people have complained about noise. But it remained for Baron (who now has a $300,000 Ford grant) to assemble evidence that showed that traumia wrought by noise is very real and very dangerous. Noise increases tension, arousal and stress; causes cholesterol changes; wakes you from the deep sleep that keeps you from psychosis: whomps up your blood pressure; delays convalescence (even normal hospital activity turns many institutions into acoustical torture chambers); traumatizes weak-hearts, worsens infections and arthritis. It may cause some stillbirths. Environmentally conscious kids are stupid when it comes to noise. The amplified rock sounds they trip on will cause many of them to become prematurely deaf. The 20,000 per second claims of hi-fi nufacturers are virtually out meaning for many a who are lucky to catch 1 cps. Many cannot hear as a as 2,000. Telephone-itis

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON. - Man's inability to let a ringing telephone ring itself out has been clinically documented only up to a point, question that remains to be answered is, is there any non t elephonic activity that man will refuse to interrupt for telephone call?

We know that he will interrupt his dinner, his bath, his conversation with interesting persons, his household entertainments and similar domestic activities at the telephone's insolent ring, even though it is a statistical certainty that the caller will be a real-estate salesman, someone with bad news or a stranger who has a wrong number.

This is not all. At a higher level of involvement, he will suspend the watching of televis-ed football games, family quar-rels, the third martini, manifestations of love.

All this we have known for years. Until very recently, however, researchers have assumed that there were some activities on which men concentrated so intensely that the telephone bell would fall on bored ears. One of these activities was thought to be bank robbery. Until receutly, it had been an article of faith among veteran observers and unimpeachable sources that no man in the act of robbing a bank would interrupt his activity to answer the telephone. 2 2 2

Well, we now know how wrong that assumption was. In South Chicago Heights, Ill., last week, a man robbing the American Savings Bank answered the tele-phone's ring, just as slavishly as you and I, poor reader, put down our knife and fork to hark to the bell we know will bring us nothing but a sales pitch for dance lessons or a plea from Cousin Odell for hail-bond money.

The caller was not a dance studio selling lessons, but a Chicago radio station, WGN, which had heard reports that a robbery was in progress at the American Savings Bank. The WGN man to whom the man at the bank who hadn't heen able to resist answering the telephone found himself talking was Don Harris, and the conversation, which deserves full reporting because of its anthropological importance, went as follows:

Harris: What's going on out

Snake Sleeper Ends World RecordAttempt

COHANNESBURG, South Africa, Dec. 27 (Reuters) .- Peter today abandoned his attempt to break the world record for sleeping with poison-ous snakes after three sleepless days and nights.

He climbed into a tiny cage Christmas Eve and planned to atay there with 30 deadly snakes until Jan. 24, to beat the previous record hy one day.

there? I understand you've got a robbery. Telephone slave: Yes. Who's this speaking, please? Harris: WGN. T.S.: This is the robber, this is the so-called robber, I guess. Harris: What are you doing

T.S.: Well, I just wanted to tell you honestly, WGN, I tried to make it the shortest way possible and it's the wrong way.

This conclusion apparently accompanied the man's observatioo that he was at the very moment surrounded by policemen. His capture was broadcast, by way of the open telephone, to WGN's listeners a few moments later.

The importance of this land-mark telephone-answering event can scarcely be overstated. If a man is now so completely under the spell of the telephone hell that he will interrupt being captured by police nuring a bank rohhery in order to answer the phone, we are on to something tremendous.

The implications for new police technique are ohvious. A robher answering the telephone is a robber who will have at least one gun hand out of action when the police arrive. Before arriving hereafter, police-men may diminish their danger by having the desk sergeant place a cali.

This is the least significant of the event's implications, how-ever. The more exciting is the possibility, which has been raised by this incident, that man has now been sufficiently con-ditioned so that he will interrupt any activity whatever in order to answer the telephone.

In any case, the evidence ia strong enough to justify testing the telephone's power in the ultimate situation. For the purpose of this test, a man approximately 125 years old will have to be found. This man should be suffering from perhaps three incurable ailments. He should be about to die,

At the instant his doctors detect the final flickering out of pulse, a telephone at his ear should ring. If the evidence compiled so far means what it seems to mean, there can be no doubt that our 125-year-old man will interrupt his dying, pick up the phone and say, "Hello."

It would be a good idea then to have, instead of a dance studio or real-estate speculator, a radio station placing the call, This would enable us to test at the same time whether, as all the evidence also suggests, everyone in America is now ready, on an instant's notice, to step into the role of performer for microphone or camera.

rupting his dying to answer the telephone, should say, upon learning that he was being called by radio station WGN, This is the so-called almost late lamented 125-year-old man. WGN, and I want to tell you how grateful I am for this wonderful century and a quarter in America'-well, that's what they call proving two points with one phone call.

Culture Is Blooming in 'The Sahara Of Bozart'

By James T. Wooten BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (NYT). —With the help of George C. Wallsce and Petr I. Tchaikovsky, this smoky city has seceded from the Sahara of the Bozart, that mythical, cultureless land lying just south of H. L. Mencken's Baltimore,

Its withdrawal was consummated last weekend in two spectacular performances of a favorite holiday ballet. "I never heard of it before and I'd never agen any tog-dancing," said Walter F. Cla-ridge in the lobby of the Municipal Auditorium after the show. The 45-year-old steel-worker smiled slightly, almost sheepishly, as he talked. "But it was really something, wasn't it? Really beautiful. I never saw anything like it before."

"Test of Culture" With unintentional accuracy, Mr. Claridge was speaking for a large segment of the audience who. like him, are part of the South's vast laboring class, and who, like him, have never before seen hallet.

"This is the true test of culture here." Mrs. David Roberts 3d, a member of the ballet company's board of directors, said exuberantly as the cavernous hall emptied. "Can you get the non-country-clubbers to come out for something like

Given her criteria, "The Nutcracker" was a success. They came by the hundreds in how ties, in corduroy jackets, in sports shirts, in suede loafers and white socks, and they were ushered to their seats by 50 young, black students in tuxedos and officially hosted by the State Labor Council of the

No Complaints

"And I noticed," observed James Hatcher, the show's director, "that nobody complained about Tchaikovsky being a Russian."

.As with other complex and demanding forms of artistic expression, the dance has traditionally been about as popular here as cricket or the balalaika; and native patrons of the arts constantly fret over the general disinterest shown by their fel-low Sootherners in "the finer

It was this attitude, a product perhaps of the region's rugged. rather sparse life styles, that drew the wrath of the grim Mr. Mencken in his famous 1920s "The Sahara of the essay. Bozart," a scathing commentary on the lack of culture in the South.

But over the last 30 years, as its economy turned away from its agrarian roots and became essentially industrial more and more Southerners have been exposed to the arts in what Ralph McGill, the late Atlanta editor, called a "blossoming renaissance.

Touring Troupes

Now, community groups are sponsoring touring theater, opera and ballet companies in cities all across the South; and, in the larger ones, artists such as Van Clihurn and Artur Rutein are being brought to chartered arts organizations. Still, despite the presence of summer.

It was precisely this point that led Mr. Wallace, now the governor-elect, to create the Alahama Council on the Arts and Humanities in 1965 during his first term. As a self-appointed spokesman for the South, Mr. Wallace often ex-presses bitterness at what he believes to he the haughty, superior attitudes of Northerners. "We're as good as they are," he says frankly and frequently.

"We're just as smart, just aa creative, just as cultured—but they still look down their noses." Fine Arts School

The council produced a state high school of the fine arts, one of only five in the nation; a joint program with the University of Alabama at Birmingbam and, finally, the ballet company whose 80 members danced their way through "The Nuteracker" amid an array of scenery and costuming that prompted sighs from tha large audiences and admiration from visiting professionals.

Mr. Wallace is honorary chairman of the company's board of directors, and he was represented at today's matinee by his 9-year-old daughter, Lee. When the curtain opened, she saw a polished corps of discl-plined performers who in the last three years have danced in Italy, Venezuela and Scot-land, and whose itinerary includes a maiden appearance local audiences by formally next month in New York City and an encore in Italy next

Mrs. Roberts, an irrepressible civic worker whose reputation in conservative Birmingham is that of "an integrationist liberal," nevertheless maintains a rigid admiration for the contributions of Mr. Wallace, not only to the ballet company, one of her favorite projects, but also to the arts in general. Over the last five years, state money has helped keep the high school and the arts program at the University Center going.

"He takes such great pride in the accomplishments of young, talented people who are from this state that he finds it almost impossible to say no to us," she said. He did, however, say no to
